Red Hatter Bingo

Print off as many bingo sheets as you need for the players you have. Each player should have their own unique sheet. These print 2 bingo sheets to a page.

To make a reusable set of bingo sheets – laminate the pages first then cut out the bingo sheets. Use buttons, bingo counters, coins, lollies or other suitable markers to mark off called symbols.

The “calling cards” page should be printed once and each square cut out to make 1 set of individual symbol cards. These are placed into a container, ready to call from. You can laminate the calling cards sheet for added durability for the pieces. It is also advisable to clip the corner points off each card when cutting them out to avoid sharp edges (especially if they are laminated)

To play the game

The caller selects a calling card, without looking, from the container and calls out the symbol on the card (eg “Red dress”). All players who have that symbol/item on their bingo sheet can mark that off. Continue until Bingo is called.

A player can call “Bingo” when they have a line of symbols marked off that includes the centre blank (free) space. The line can be vertical, horizontal or diagonal – so long as it includes the blank space. If you prefer, you can eliminate the need for the line to go through the blank space, and accept any line of 5 symbols.

Each player should have their own unique bingo sheet. If you have more players than bingo sheets, you can print more sheet pages, however this will mean there are 2 players with the same sheet (meaning there could be 2 people with winning sheets) However it may also be possible to have more than 1 winner even with each player having a unique sheet, if the called symbols make the bingo pattern on more than 1 sheet. So it is advisable to have enough prizes to allow for this, or announce that in the event of 2 (or more) winning calls, the prize will be shared among all winners.

These bingo cards were made so that each card would have a random assortment of the symbols on them. While I've tried to make sure there are no duplicate symbols on each card, it's possible I might have made a mistake and not noticed. If you find a card with 2 of the same symbol on it – please let me know which card, so I can fix it!
